

Private Residence - La Grange Park

Before

Built in the spring of 2010, we were hired to create and reinvigorate a tired landscape for a young family. This project lacked a clear connection from the front and back of the property as well as it did not provide a strong street appearance. The wonderful old White Pines on the site were seen by the owner as a problem, where we saw them as the connective element to the entire project. We changed the front walk and extended it to the street to make it more inviting, added a stone walking path along the side to elongate the property and add depth, we utilized as many existing plants as possible and reorganized them with new plants to areas that worked best with the varying microclimates of the site. The new plants and shapely curves in the landscape give new life to this garden from season to season and with the addition of landscape lighting extend it morning, noon and night.
